The $20,000 donation has been earmarked for critical needs such as; funds for the Minor Middle School Band Program to purchase new instruments, school library updates and improvements, equipment for the physical education department and more. In addition, each student in the 8th grade class, received a coveted Haddad Backpack from the Jordan Brand collection, to carry school supplies in the new school year.

"This donation from Hibbett and Jordan is very meaningful to our band program," said Martinius Everett, Principal, Minor Middle School. "Our band program has helped students develop discipline, perseverance, and character. In addition, many of our students develop a life-long passion for band and continue to study music at the post-secondary level. This donation will also be used to purchase materials for our library as we look to modernize as well as educational resources for our P.E. departments, and other areas of academic support."

The check presentation took place at the Minor Middle School gymnasium on Friday morning with local representatives from Hibbett, City Gear, Jordan, Minor Middle School leadership, educators and students. In addition, there was a surprise video from Cam

Jordan of the New Orleans Saints and a special appearance from the Minor High School Marching Band.

"Hibbett has been an anchor in the Birmingham area for more than 76 years and we proudly support educational and athletic programs that improve the lives of youth in our community," said, Sarah Sharp-Wangaard, VP Marketing, Hibbett. "We are so happy to partner with Jordan and be able to help Minor Middle School start the new school year off right with much needed infrastructure and supplies for their students."

Hibbett believes in the power of education and sport to break barriers, build community and change the world for the better. To connect with schools in local neighborhoods where Hibbett and City Gear operate, Hibbett conducts regular outreach to educational and athletic programs in need of support. Additionally, Hibbett donates to dozens of schools annually through its Sole School program, with funds, in kind donations, mentoring and job opportunities.
